Director Note

Big Fish is an incredible story about love, adventure and storytelling. Most importantly though, it is about family and how we fit together with our family even if we don't see eye to eye. When I first read through the script, I kept envisioning puzzle pieces. Every one of Edward Bloom's stories that he tells to his child, Will, is a puzzle piece that helps shape the person Edward is. Many elements of the show were inspired by those puzzle pieces. Each story that is told has its own 'piece' on the stage. The pieces only come together at the very end. The characters you see come to life in the stories, all have distinct colors, showing that they belong to that piece of the puzzle. Because the stories are outrageous and impossible, Will wants no part of the puzzle. You'll notice that for the majority of the production, Will does not set foot or even acknowledge the pieces of the puzzle that is in front of him. Will Bloom is the final puzzle piece that will help shape who Edward Bloom is.
